- Moving Beyond Equity to Reparative Philanthropy & Reparations

Will Cordery, Principal, Freedom Futures; Senior Advisor, Liberated Capital
Edgar Villanueva, CEO, Decolonizing Wealth Project

Over the past five years, the Decolonizing Wealth Project (DWP) has spearheaded efforts in philanthropy to challenge colonial dynamics within our cultures and giving practices. Join us as we explore how we're fostering cultures of repair in philanthropy and the community, including our work on reparations. This session will introduce our Reparative Philanthropy Framework and feature discussions with funders confronting their past for a more equitable future.

Molly Rand, Senior Philanthropic Advisor, The Chicago Community Trust

Kimberly Spear, Director of Donor Engagement, Community Foundation for Greater Atlanta

Orient and activate your new and existing donors and set the stage for a robust and long-term advising relationship with a solid plan for onboarding, engagement and annual reviews. We will highlight best practices and tips and tricks while also encouraging an open dialogue among participants to offer a shared learning experience for all.

- Oh, the Things I Have Seen!

Encino, Lobby Level

Robin Ferriby, Senior Counsel, Clark Hill PLLC

This session will explore some of the bad-and good-legal, policy and procedure issues observed by the presenter in his legal practice since leaving his community foundation position in 2018. And how, your community foundation might address or avoid these issues.

- Leveraging Nonprofit Endowment Funds

Villa, Ballroom Level

Jeremy Wells, Senior Vice President of Philanthropic Services, Saint Paul & Minnesota Foundation

Nonprofit endowment funds (or agency funds) seem to be a very polarizing topic amongst community foundations. For some CFs, they manage hundreds of these relationships for hundreds of millions of dollars. For others, they don't want anything to do with them. So, what is the right answer for your CF? This session will explore the best ways to leverage these nonprofit funds should you choose to explore them more, or if you already have them, how to amplify their impact they are having at both your CF and in the community.

- Legacy and Vision: Laying the Groundwork with Your Donors

Diane Higginbotham, Senior Consultant, 21/64

Many donors have the motivation to dream big and make an impact, but don't always know how to arrive at a vision for change. As a community foundation professional, we often inquire, "what do you want to fund?" For some donors, that question is enough. For others who need more, we have an opportunity to guide them on a journey grounded in legacy and envisioning a better future. Join Diane Higginbotham as she shares how 21/64 and you can accompany your donor on a journey to discover their Philanthropic Identity. Together we'll honor the past and begin to clarify our vision for the future, practicing the work we can do with our fund holders back home in our communities.

- Navigating Family Philanthropy: Planning for Legacy, Continuity, and Change

Hidalgo, Ballroom Level

Shannon Jeffries, Manager of Partnership Development, National Center for Family Philanthropy

Jennifer Curry, Director of Giving Strategies, Oregon Community Foundation

Daria Teutonico, Director of Programs, National Center for Family Philanthropy

Philanthropy has the power to unite or divide. With thoughtful planning, you can guide families to ensure their giving has a lasting impact by facilitating discussions on identity, next generation engagement, and legacy. This session explores the Succession and Legacy component of NCFP's Family Giving Lifecycle, focusing on key questions: What is the significance of their philanthropy? Who will steward it after the original donor? How can families prepare future stewards?

- We Can Accept Cows... A Marketing Campaign for Non-Cash Assets

Encino, Lobby Level

Melanie Hoffert, Chief Marketing Officer, Saint Paul & Minnesota Foundation

Mai-Anh Tran, Assistant Vice President of Philanthropic Services, Saint Paul & Minnesota Foundation

There are many ways for donors to contribute to their charitable funds. It's not uncommon that they might limit their giving to cash and don't think about giving other assets like stock, real estate or retirement accounts. Many non-cash gifts can provide income during a donor's lifetime or significant tax benefits—or both. Thinking about charitable giving in cash-only terms limits the impact they can make on their favorite causes because less than 10% of America's wealth is held in cash.

- The Evolution of Giving Days into Endowment Building Machines

Villa, Ballroom Level

Mary Holmes, President & Chief Executive Officer, Cumberland Community Foundation

Ralph Serpe, President & Chief Executive Officer, Adams County Community Foundation

Giving trends are changing. At the same time, community foundations of all sizes are yearning to have a greater impact and engage a more diverse donor community. Ralph Serpe, Adams County Community Foundation, and Mary Holmes, Cumberland Community Foundation, are proven community foundation leaders and endowment builders. They will share the inspiration, strategies, and operations behind their foundations' enormously successful giving days and demonstrate why giving days meet both short term and long term endowment building strategic goals. Participants will leave with tool kits for running two different types of giving days and the courage to move forward.

- Opening Doors: How to Build an Advisor Managed Fund Program

Hidalgo, Ballroom Level

Stacey Landry, Vice President for Advancement & Philanthropic Services, Essex County Community Foundation

Jennifer Mayo, Director of Gift Planning & Advisor Relations, Essex County Community Foundation

In order to compete with the national DAF sponsors, community foundations rely on professional advisors to be ambassadors and key referral sources. Using the lure of an Advisor Managed Fund where the financial advisor retains both assets under management and fees of charitable assets is key to unlocking the doors to broader conversation about the benefits of partnering with a community foundation. Learn how Essex County Community Foundation built its Advisor Managed Fund from design, approval, implementation, marketing and growth.
